Moore vs. Greenhow

At last we have the official opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Moore vs. Greenhow, decided more than three weeks age. As every lawyer will wish to see it for himself, we copy it in full. It is objects and makes the retention of Meruas fellows: SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES. No. 905 .- OCTOBER TERM, 1884.

P. T. Moore, Plaintiff in Error, the Su-Samuel C. Greenhow, Treasurer of the City of Richmond. of Va. (May 4, 1885.)

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the Court.

The plaintiff in error filed his tion on April 26, 1884, in the Circuit Court of the city of Richmond, against Greenhow, the defendant, as Treasurer of the city of Richmond, praying for a rule nisi, commanding the said Greenhow to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not be awarded to the plaintiff, commanding the said Treasurer to issue to the petitioner a certificate in writing stating that he had made the deposit required by law in payment of his license tax. as a sample merchant in said city. The petition set forth that the tender made in payment of this deposit consisted of coupons cut from bonds issued by the State of Virginia, and, by contract with the State therein declared, receivable in payment of all taxes, debts, demands, and dues to the State, and that the tender was refused by the Treasurer, and a certificate of deposit withheld, because the 112th section of an act of the General Assembly of Virginia, approved March 15, 1884, for the purpose of assessing taxes on persons, property, and incomes, and licenses, requires that all license taxes shall be paid in gold or silver coin. United in gold or silver coin, United States Treasury notes, or national bank notes, and not in coupons, and another act of the General Assembly of the State, approved March 7, 1884, to regulate the granting of licenses, likewise forbids the payment of license damus, the plaintiff in error seeks to compel the officers of the State of Virginia specifically to receive coupons in-S. 769, according to which the plaintiff in error is remitted to the remedy provided by the act of January 14, 1882, "an act to prevent frauds upon the Commonwealth and the holders of her securities in the collection and disbursement of revenues." The judgment of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia is, therefore, Affirmed.

Mr. Justice Field and Mr. Justice Harlan adhere to the views expressed in their dissenting opinions in Antoni principles announced by the majority in that case, if applied to the present case, require an affirmance of the judg-ment below. True copy-Test :

Clerk Supreme Court U. S. It will be seen that the opinion is more clearly brought out here than it was in the telegram that was sent out from Washington purporting to give it on the 5th instant. Mr. GREENHOW pleaded expressly the act of March 15, 1884, which requires all licenses to be paid for in money and not in coupons. The Court states that two Virginia laws were pleaded as justifying Mr. GREEN-How's refusal to accept coupons in payment of license taxes. But it says not one word as to whether those laws are constitutional or not. Surely the Court would have taken time to say so if it had considered those laws unconstitutional. We still think, therefore, that those laws are in full force. What, then, did the Court decide? Not what many persons suppose it to have decided. It is because MOORE sought by mandamus to compel GREEN-How to accept coupons that the court affirmed the judgment of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. The Court says it remits MOORE to his remedy provided by the act of January 14, 1882.

What was that remedy? Singularly enough, section 4th of the act of January 14, 1882, provides how the parties shall proceed in cases of mandamus arising under the act. MOORE asked in the Circuit Court for a rule nisi commanding GREENHOW to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not be awarded him (MOORE). The Circuit Court refused it. The Virginia Court of Appeals affirmed that decision, and the Supreme Court of the United States affirmed this last decision and remitted MOORE to his remedy provided by the act of January 14, 1882. Therefore, we ask again, What was this remedy to which MOORE was remitted? The urth section above referred to provides that when persons apply for mandamus to compel the collector to take coupons taxes, they must proceed in a certain way, and in the County Court.

that he is willing to receive the coupons as soon as proved to be genuine. If, of the petitioner, "the mandamus shall issue requiring the coupons to be received for taxes," &c.

The act of January 14, 1882, requires the suits to begin in the County Court. The third section so provides in express terms; and the fourth section (concerning mandamus) so provides by necessary implication, seeing that it provides for "an appeal to the Circuit Court."

In a word, MOORE filed his petition in the Circuit Court, whereas the act of January 14, 1882, requires such petitions to be filed in the County Court. Is it not, then, most consonant with common sense to hold that the Supreme Court remitted MOORE to this remedy? and decided nothing as to the laws of 1884 ?

Mr. Gladstone's Policy. Since the adjournment of the British Parliament for the holidays official advices regarding the Afghan question have been meagre. Such intelligence as has come to hand shows not only that the matter cannot be considered as settled, but negatives the idea so much harped upon by the Jingoes and some of our northern contemporaries that England is prepared to concede everything. One of the latest telegrams, and that from a Russian source, is that Russia insists that Meruchak belongs to Penjdeh, but England chak a sine qua non. This is a straw, but a significant one. It shows, in connection with what we have been told the Ameer is willing to do, that Mr. GLADSTONE is willing to concede what he believes it to be right to concede, and no more. Nor is this all that the lull has developed that is important. Sober second thought seems to be justifying and strengthening Mr. GLADSTONE, as it had done on several occasions previously. It is not the least of the proofs of Mr. GLADSTONE'S least of the proofs of Mr. GLADSTONE'S cause not one foreigner in a thousand statesmanship that he knows exactly has the courage to tackle Russian. when to give the people a breathing spell. Conscious of his own integrity of purpose, he calls a halt at the opportune moment, and trusts confidently that public reflection upon the facts will strengthen his hold. In the present instance his confidence has been no more misplaced than heretofore. The English people are none the less determined to fight now, if English honor and the maintenance of English prestige demand that they should, than they were during the intense excitement that followed the "Penjdeh incident." but they are beginning to ask whether or not such a | Senator Mahone and Readjustment demand exists. They are beginning to ask | To the Editor of the Dispatch : whether or not England has made any concession incompatible with her honor, and whether or not there has yet been a casus belli. They are beginning to consider the moral aspect of the situation as Mr. GLADSTONE virtually presented it in his speech on the motion for a vote of credit. They are inquiring whether the civilized world would justify England in plunging into a long and bloody war on any provocation she has so far demonstrating, Mr. ARCHIBALD This being a case in which, by man- FORBES, the war correspondent, among the number, and he (Mr. FORBES) states the situation with great clearstead of money in payment of license ness, we think. Mr. FORBES is anytaxes, it comes within the exact terms thing but a sensational writer. He and he and his allies were the true and thing but a sensational writer. of the decision of a majority of this deals in facts; and when he says that genuine debt-payers. And this, too, England will not go beyond a limit England will not go beyond a limit already determined upon in concession to Russia he speaks whereof he Readjusters, with Mahone as their knows. The Russian war party, he adds, is mistaken if it supposes that mand as to the Afghan frontier. She the residue, as contended for by the Re has made, declares Mr. FORBES, all adjusters. the concessions she is going to make. But these are not the most significant statements that Mr. FORBES makes. He not only asserts-and if he is not posted on that point who should be?-that England is more willing to go to war to-day than is Russia, but vindicates the policy of Mr. GLADSTONE. He says in effect that England, while not courting a conflict and not ready to fight without such provocation as would in the eyes of civilization justify war would, nevertheless, not be reluctant to accept the gauge of battle if fairly cast. This, we con-

Is there no way in which these $500 uits can be taken back to the Supreme Court of the United States?

Judge HUGHES ought to be ashamed of himself to turn loose upon the Treasury of Virginia all the $500 "cutworms." And he the man that coined the phrase "cut-worms of the Treasury," and applied it to coupons !

Please permit me to tender my acknowledgments to the Dispatch for the adroit and successful manner in which it has been following the trail of the little red fox, Mahone.

William Mahone, take him altogether, is rather a curious mortal-

"He wires in and wires out, Andleaves a body still in doubt Whether the snake that makes the track is going south or coming back." When we revert to the history of readjustment in Virginia, it seems almost ncredible that Mahone even, with all diators of the State debt. Wonders, we are told, will never cease. Never, I verily believe, as long as William Mahone lives.

The Democrats, he maintains in his in face of the fact that for four or five leader, and the Democrats, was whether the State should pay all of her debt minus the one-third assignment to West England will yield to any and every de- Virginia, or only about two thirds of > the two parties. This issue was dis-cussed and rediscussed on every hustings in Virginia. The thunders of Re-adjuster and Democratic eloquence reverberated from every hill-top in the old Commonwealth. In some three or four hard-fought battles between the two parties the Readjusters, backed by President Arthur and the other Federal authorities in Washington, vanquished the Democrats, routed them, horse, foot, and dragoon, and thus declared and redeclared that only about twothirds of the original two thirds of the State debt should be paid which idea was incorporated in Riddleberger bill, thus reducing the debt from some thirty-two millions to some twenty-one millions. The Democrats having thus sustained defeat after defeat on this issue, solemnly resolved in their State Convention at Lynchburg, in deference to the popular will, to acquiesce in the settlement made by the Riddleberger bill and to do whatever they legitimately could, as soon as they obtained control of the legislation of the State, to carry out in good faith the provisions of that now famous bill. The Democrats being thus coerced by the overwhelming opposition of the Readjusters, backed by the whole power and patronage of the Arthur Ad ninistration, either to endorse the settlement of the debt made by them and approved by a very decided majority of the people, or to surrender the control of the State government indefinitely to Mahone and his party, wisely chose the first alternative, and have since passed various acts of Assembly in aid of the Riddleberger bill and the more effectually to carry its provisions into effect. The connection of the Democratic party with the Riddleberger bill hath this extent—no more.

Yet Mahone, the father of repudiation in Virginia-if that bastard has a father-with a full knowledge of all the facts of the case, has the unblushing effrontery to say in his Miller letter that the Democrats are the real repudiators, and he and his friends the genuine ators, and he and his friends the genuine debt-payers.

I sincerely hope and believe that at the next November election the people of Virginia will so thoroughly repudiate him and his political monstrosities that in all time to come it will be a matter of perfect indifference "to the whole world and the rest of mankind" what he thinks or what he says. If a party ever did make an honest make an office. Make him color-sergeant of the tramp brigade.
